Mrs. Marrill's Concert.

Madam Katherine Noack Fique of New York, who sings at Mrs. Merrill's benefit concert in Broadway theater Wednesday, Oct. 6, is a dramatic soprano of marked ability and beautifut voice. The Brooklyn Freie Presse said of a recent concert: "The central figure was decidedly Mrs. Katherine Noack Fique, who sang the soprano solo in Melamet's America. Her voice was distinguished by clearness of tone and fine shading. The audience was charmed and gave expression to their appreciation by long and hearty applause." Madam Katherine Noack Fique

BROADWAY THEATER.

May Robson in The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary.

May Robson is fortunate in securing May Robson is fortunate in securing for her first starring vehicle a comedy so interesting and unique as The Re-juvenation of Aunt Mary, which will be seen at the Broadway theater on Monday. Oct. 4.

The entire cast and production will be seen here as played for one whole year from coast to coast. Those who see her will enjoy one of the theatrical treats of the season, and those who do not see her will miss a great deal. The critics have endorsed it as one of the best comedies ever seen in that

The play is as pure and refreshing blow across the meadows one sees through the window of Aunt Mary's "settin' room," and after seeing the play one leaves the theater with a bet-ter feeling toward all mankind; with the feeling one has spent an evening in a worth while manner. It is one hig surprise for the theatergoer, not the tame mediocre comedy that one might be led to expect from the post ers of Aunt Mary, but a breezy, new and different sort of comedy that makes one laugh with a whole souled spirit. The lines just scintillate with dit and humor and Aunt Mary "prob-ably most likely" is the author of it all, s big bearted woman of general im-pulses, all bound up in her scapegout Seats on sale at the box office and Comata, the Sioux, Sensational Indian Motion Picture.

Again the Breed theater comes to the front with one of the finest feature motion pictures seen here this season and the fascinating and mystical title of Comata, the Sioux, serves but to in-crease the interest which is manifested crease the interest which is manifested in the picturesque silent drama. Aside from the educational value and scenic splender of the picture, the very thrilling and touching story of the forsaken bride of the white cowboy, who has been betrothed to another of her, race pamed Comata, is one which the spectators follow with unabated interest. Marvelously true to life, the deserted young squaw, when confronted with Marvelously true to life, the deserted young squaw, when confronted with the true facts of the case, clasps the tiny pappoose to her bosom and, carrying with her the sorrows and burdens of a bleeding heart, wends her way over the rugged hills, falling now and then by the wayside from faintness and hunger, until the former discarded Indian suitor, who has followed her on the weary journey, comes to her assistance and under the protection of his voluminous bianket the trin are seen passing over the long hills to the old home.

As a preface to this great picture.
Alsa Alwin sings the haunting Lily of the Prairie one of the prettiest indian songs of the day, and the bell chorus is most captivating and makes are notice necessary, she later singing the dashing Spanish belero Leonore with the effect.

The Thief.

Teaching a great lesson without being "preachy," telling a tremendous story in the simplest of ways; that is The Thief, which is to be seen at the Broadway theater on Saturday, Oct 2. So many people saw The Thief during its ten months' run at the Lyceum theater. New York, that its fame has spread rapidly and logically.

The Thief has been so built that its story is not ended until the final curtain. There is none of the anti-climax of the drama which devotes a last act to straightening out a plot and marrying people off. Moreover, just so long as the story takes in telling, just so long is the time of the play supposed to be—all being concluded in an evening. Moving Pictures and Illustrated Songs ing.

Two eminent reviewers said two significant things of The Thief—one that as many husbands as possible should be compelled to see the play and the other that the effect of a sermon was reached without preaching, the audience propounding its own, homily from a text furnished by the author.

A Lawyer on Lawyers.

Samuel Untermyer, the distinguished New York lawyer, the will defend a woman charged with murder and too poor to employ counsel, commends the action of the judges in assigning leaders of the bar to such cases. He has heard it eaid that the New York criminal has been a bard way and be thus inal bar is in a bad way, and he thus places the responsibility for the actual conditions, whatever they may be:

conditions, whatever they may be:

If the criminal bar of this city is in a shocking condition we lawyers are to blame. It is only with us, and principally in New York city, that the flower of the bar has been drawn away from the higher sphere of advocacy by the temptation of money, to become highly paid clerks to financiers, and, too often, to assist them in "keeping prayerfully within the law." For this the press and public must also bear their share of the responsibility, through the importance and position which they give to the mere defense of private interests. As soon as we realize that the defense of life, liberty and reputation is more important to the community than the mere championship of money interests, there will be a change for the better.

Such talk from a man who can and Such talk from a man who can and Such talk from a man who can and does command very large fees is wholesome and may be expected to be helpful in bringing about a better state of affairs. It has long been notorious that rich men accused of crime could keep their cases before the courts for a long time. That many poor men, especially in the great cities, like New York and Chicago, were convicted after trials in which their rights were inadequately defended has been evident to make appropriation therefor, and do make appropriation therefor, and do make appropriation therefor, and do quately defended has been evident to those who have given the matter seri-ous thought. Mr. Untermyer says that ous thought. Mr. Untermyer says that in every civilized country except our own leaders of the bar are proud to be selected to defend life, liberty and reputation. It is much to his credit that he is ready to do his part.—Hartford Courant.

Colorado's Leading Industry.

leves that the period of its greatest mineral production lies far in the future. Colorado's mines are not ex-hausted and the limits of productive-ness and of variety cannot yet be drawn. But mining is not, and it never will be again, Colorado's principal in-dustry.

Manufacturing is important to the ozone laden breeze that might state. The richness of Colorado's coal across the meadows one sees deposits and the tremendous power of its waterfalls, together with the wealth and variety of its raw materials, make it certain that Colorado is going to be one of the world's greatest going to be one of the world's greatest centers of manufacturing.

But manufacturing is not Colorado's greatest industry, and it is not the industry that is the most important factor in Puebio's growth, even though this city's future as a great manufacturing center is plainly marked.

The development of Colorado agriculture—the phenomenal success resulting from the intensive cultivation of small farms under irrigation—is the most important incident of Colorado's progress. It is the surest evidence of this city's growth and prosperity.—Pueblo Chieftain.
